2024 GRANT WRITING WORKSHOP INSTRUCTIONS

- You will create (in advance of the workshop) a proposal in response to the guidelines below. If you do not currently have a project in the works that you can write about, that is no problem. Just imagine a project you’d like to do, and propose what that would look like.
- Bring a paper copy of your proposal with you to the workshop so that you and a faculty mentor can review it together.

Follow the two prompts below to create your workshop materials.

1. Narrative description of the proposed research (two to three pages, double spaced, 12 point font) that contains the following:
   1. Project Rationale: Please describe your reasoning for undertaking this research project and the impact you believe your project will have on understanding of or policies affecting human rights.
   2. Impact: Identify the expected contribution your research will make to the field of human rights.
   3. Methodology: Explain how you will conduct your research. Be explicit in describing the types of methods employed and the advantage of using these particular methods.

2. Anticipated budget and budget justification (of up to $2,500). The purpose of the budget narrative is to supplement the information provided in the anticipated budget document to demonstrate you have considered the costs associated with your research. The narrative is different from the spreadsheet in that rather than listing expected costs in dollars, the narrative explains the rationales for these expected costs.
